

The New Mexico Film Office Announces Code Name: Geronimo Shooting in New Mexico

The production will employ at least 100 New Mexico crew members and at least 380 principal and background talent

Contact: Angela Heisel
(505)827-0309

February 1, 2012, SANTA FE —New Mexico Film Office director Nick Maniatis announced today that Voltage Productions is shooting a feature film titled Code Name: Geronimo in New Mexico. Production will begin this month in Santa Fe.

The production will employ at least 100 New Mexico crew members and at least 380 principal and background talent.

Directed by John Stockwell and produced by New Mexican Tony Mark, Nicoals Chartier, Zev Foreman and, Code Name: Geronimo tells the story of the manhunt for Osama Bin Laden and serves as the riveting backdrop for a gripping story about the combined efforts of an extraordinary group of Navy Seals. This is the story of a clandestine operation, a perfect storm of people, and the rare synergy of circumstances that would amount to the most daring military operation of our generation, inspired by the true story of how it almost fell apart.

Visit the New Mexico Film Office online at nmfilm.com