New Mexico Film Office Announces Feature Film “Spiral into the Yellow Void” Wrapped Production in New Mexico

Santa Fe, NM - New Mexico Film Office Director Amber Dodson announced today that the feature film, “Spiral into the Yellow Void,” wrapped filming in and around Santa Fe through April.

“Spiral into the Yellow Void,” starring Monique Candelaria (“Breaking Bad”), Ellar Coltrane (“Boyhood”), and Kelton Jones (“Passion of the Christs”), directed by Levin Garbisch (“Miranda Veil”), and produced by Jordan Henderson with Planet Froth and Maggie Brown with Purple Magnet Productions (“Yellow Wallpaper”), is the story of a psychic healer who heals other people's trauma while battling her own personified depression.

“My films often deal with real-life issues while being very strange and otherworldly,” Garbisch said. “I moved to New Mexico during the pandemic and found the scenery and serenity very beautiful as the backdrop for this story.”

The production intentionally incorporated elements of New Mexico, including Native American diversity, in casting.

The production employed 35 New Mexicans – 25 crew members and 10 principal actors.
