Marketing and Business Development Director

Staff Dev Director - Infection Control Nurse

Currently working

Correctional Care Nurse / Detention And Corrections-Prison

As a Correction nurse I'm working in a wide scope of practice and am faced with new and diverse challenges everyday ranging from emergent to basic. Starting from the initial intake that determines a new detainees current state of health and the facilities ability to provide adequate care as well as identify potential critical infection control trigger points. On an on going daily basis we provide medications, labs, treatment and sick calls. Sick call includes determining and treating a wide range of problems and following nursing protocol to establish treatment under the guidance of a licensed Provider.

Correctional Care LPN/LVN - Infection control nurse

Maxim Healthcare Services/ @GCCF and PNM-V - Albuquerque, NM

June 2022 to Present

At all Corrections facilities contracting Wexford healthcare: On a daily basis nursing staff provide medications, labs, treatments and sick calls. Sick call includes determining and treating a wide range of problems and following nursing protocol to establish treatment under the guidance of a licensed MD, PA or NP Provider

Chronic Care Clinics and Annual Health Maintenance tasks are part of the routine care protocol.

My responsibilities at Guadalupe Correctional Care Facility as the Infectious Disease Control nurse included Testing and providing Covid Vaccinations, T.B testing for Staff and Inmates, immunization administration and tracking with NMSIIS and running the ECHO Hep C program through UNM. Providing infection control education and encouraging compliance on an ongoing routine basis. Monthly reporting submitted on a timely basis. Attending and contributing at monthly meetings was mandatory as well.

LPN Correctional Nurse

Sandoval and McKinley County Detention Center-Corr Health Contract Travel Nurse - Gallup, NM

November 2020 to May 2022

As a Detention Center Facility nurse I'm working within a bizarrely wide scope of practice and am fascinated with the broad spectrum diversity between redundant basic daily tasks and imminently life threatening emergent events that fill each shift. I frequently grin at the simplicity that represents the wild, crazy and unpredictable events that just played out. Starting from an initial intake that simply intends to determine a new detainees current state of health and the ability of the facility to provide adequate care appears to be a reasonable match. We call this the Meet and Greet. At this time we also attempt to identify potential critical infection control trigger points.

On an on going daily basis we provide medications, labs, treatment and sick calls. Sick call includes determining and treating a wide range of problems and following nursing protocol to establish treatment under the guidance of a licensed MD, PA or NP Provider.

Being able to quickly and competently make critical emergent decisions and execute life saving maneuvers "successfully" and independently has been an amazing experience and a career validator. Detox by Detention, as I call it, is a slippery slope with no boundaries. Hard as it might be to believe, people aren't always forthright or accurate reporters of either historic or immediate behaviors. Then there's the onset of diabetic, respiratory and cardiac chronic disease process exacerbations from those that forgot to mention they take meds, and, it goes without explanation, the existence of grim potentials always looms without limits. This unique nursing role has been unbelievably generous providing opportunities to reinforce the standards of care as well as forging into formerly unexperienced territories. Being non judgmental regarding another human beings life circumstances is a must .. some young people and mentally ill never even got a fair chance to survive and thrive. We need more programs and funds to help some of the broken piece a safe clean life together.
